Native Games: Traditional Games Played by our Ancestors

Native Games are a celebration of our cultures. We will be having a wonderful day of archery, shinny, hand games, atlatl, first foods, and more! “These ancient skills are important to all people: Just like storytelling, values of the culture are infused into the games. The games teach honor, respect, and responsibility to others - key values that have been lost, as modern society promotes to be “the individual best”. The games address American Indian health from a holistic stance as education is paired with spiritual, mental, and physical survival skills of past.”

International Traditional Games Society

Hand Games in Oregon from Shared History Tribal History: “Located along the Umpqua River, the Cow Creek Band used bones that were a little over 3 inches long. They were actually made from hollow bones. The marked bones were scored, which helped to keep the buckskin or leather strand tied to it. They also scored the ends of both bones.

The Siletz People used the same size bones, with a leather band around the middle.

Along the Hood River, the Wasco Nation called the game tlukuma, and they cut a groove and marked the end, but instead of going around the bones, they made five deep incisions at the end called yakimutema, and the bones were a little bit shorter at only three inches long. The unmarked bones were called “cola” meaning man, and the marked bones were called “skaguilak,” meaning woman.

The Klamath Tribes called the game loipas. The bones for them were called Skútash and instead of carving into the bones to help the buckskin or leather band stick, they used sticky black gum from plants. There was anywhere from six to 12 sticks to help keep track of which side was correctly guessing. Again, each tribe played for a different number of points, and the counting sticks were made from materials such as willow branches that were light, portable, and sturdy. The Klamath Tribes called these kshesh and painted them red with a point at the end, while the Siletz had a black burned band at the top.

The Umatilla tribe tied the two bones together and wrapped a cord around one of them” Tribal History Shared History

Dear <<MEMBERNAME>>,

Hello, again! I would like to invite you to a special meeting to improve quality healthcare access for our AllCare Health Native American/Alaskan Native members. The meeting will be held Wednesday, June 4th, from 6:00 - 8:00 pm at AllCare Health Community Rooms, 1701 NE 7th Street, Grants Pass.

We want to hear what works, what doesn't work, and your ideas about how to make it easy to see your Primary Care Provider. Please, tell us how we can do better. There will be incentives for those who come to the meeting. Your answers will be used to improve the quality and access to healthcare providers for our Pacific Islander members.

This letter is a follow up to the survey I sent out in January. If you are interested, please RSVP by scanning the QR code by May 30th. It would also help if you could answer the questions in the survey below.

Have any of the following kept you from scheduling regular doctor's visits? (check all that apply):

- ☐ No health insurance.
- ☐ Long wait times for appointments.
- ☐ Discrimination from your provider. (this can be based on race, immigration status, sex, gender, sexual orientation, etc.)
- ☐ No transportation or can't take time off from work.
- ☐ Not speaking English well or needing an interpreter.

Additional comments:
